

Do you have problems in your neighborhood you want to fix? There are many complications on earth at the moment that we can fix. Think about the problems in your community that affect you and your friends like littering, pollution, or crime.

Firstly, think about the problems in your community that affect you and your friends, like littering. Littering is a big problem in mostly big neighborhoods but it happens in small ones too. It is important to get involved when a place you live in is getting trashed. You have to think of solutions like organizing a club to pick up the garbage.

Create a club in your neighborhood to get garbage bags and go around while walking your dogs or during your free time to pick up trash.

Secondly, think about the problems in your community that affect you and your friends, like pollution. Pollution is getting bigger and bigger and it's a giant problem.

It's dangerous for animals and humans. A fix to this problem is to avoid burning leaves, trash, and other materials or try using less gas. These are solutions just for air pollution, there are way more fixes to this problem and we need to do them.

To continue, think about the problems in your community that affect you and your friends, like crime. Crime happens more often than you think in small neighborhoods, like break ins. To solve this problem you can do things like get cameras or a security system, or organize a neighborhood watch system. There are many things to do to fix this problem. You just have to put in effort.

In conclusion, all you have to do is think about the problems in your community that affect you and your friends like littering, pollution, or crime and find solutions and take action to solve them in your neighborhood with teamwork.
