

Racism and police brutality

Racism and police brutality has been happening a lot more often recently. But it's not like it's never happened before. I'm going to tell you a little bit about the experiences around the world.

To start with, George floyd passed away on May 25, 2020. A policeman killed him. And another one sat there watching. Yes policies can be nice and help us but you have to always be careful with who you can trust with your life.

Continuing, the recent killings of George Floyd, Breonna Taylor, Tony McDade, and Ahmaud Arbery -to name a few people- have resulted in widespread protests and support not only from the Black community, but from allies across the world.

In conclusion, as the COVID-19 pandemic continues to shock the globe and disproportionately affect Black communities, an additional long-running U.S. epidemic has rapidly gained disproportionate police brutality against the Black community. Being killed by the police is a leading cause of death for Black men in America. Blacks are 3.5 times more likely than Whites to be killed by a police officer in the U.S.
