

MOVIE PLOT

Timing: 45- 60 minutes

Movie Plot

You just scored a meeting with one of Hollywood's top movie producers for your historical thriller. The meeting is tomorrow so you need to prepare.

1. What interesting historical event will you base your movie on?
2. Summarize the actual history of the person your movie will be based on.
3. Describe the basic plot of your movie. How does it differ from the actual event?
4. Who are the main characters in the movie? What actors do you think should play them?
5. What is the main setting/s of the movie? Where filmed? What scenic items need to be included in the movie (structure, specific props, etc.)?

Copyright©2015 History Gal. All rights reserved.

Action!

6. Pick a scene from the movie. Explain the background of the scene and then include an excerpt of the scene (dialogue, action occurring, etc.) If needed, use a separate piece of paper.

Copyright©2015 History Gal. All rights reserved.

7. In the film strip, draw a segment of the film. Each film square should show just 1 part of the scene/film segment.

Copyright©2015 History Gal. All rights reserved.

8. What will you say when the producer asks "why should I produce your movie?"

There are 2 versions of page 5. One with and without the fine print. Pick the one you want to use.

This is due at the end of class

The Fine Print:
While there is no actual movie producer interested in your movie, I will pick one plot as my favorite and that person will receive extra credit.

Each students will need a copy of each of the 5 pages.

Movie Plot

You just scored a meeting with one of Hollywood's top movie producers for your historical thriller. The meeting is tomorrow so you need to prepare.

1. What interesting historical event or person will you base your movie on?
2. Summarize the actual historical event or the life of the person your movie will be based on.
3. Describe the basic plot of your movie and if it will differ from the actual event.

4. Who are the main characters in the movie? What actors do you think should play them?

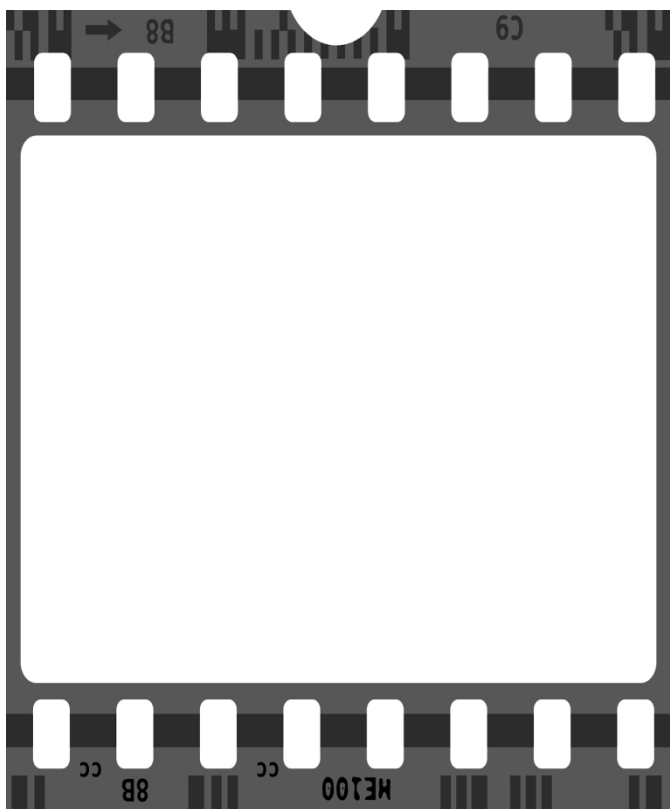

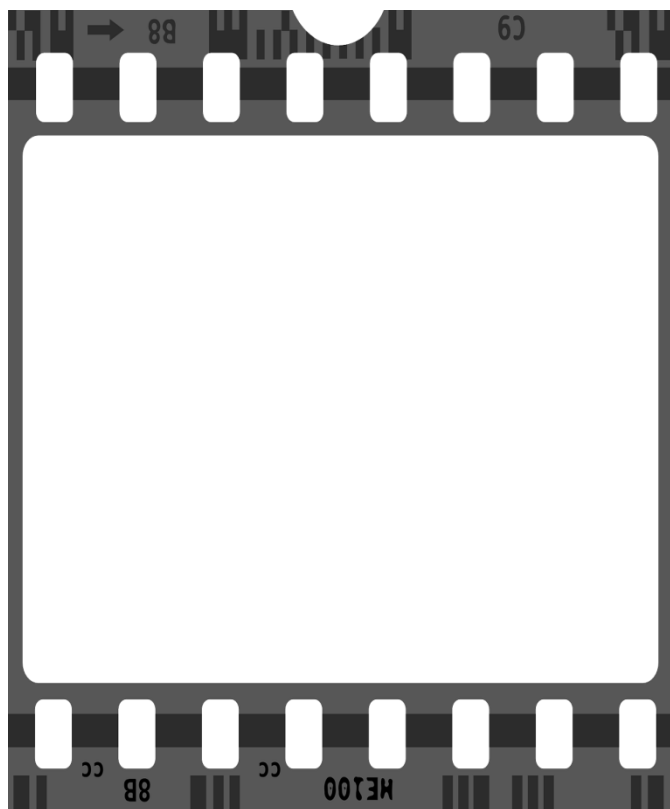

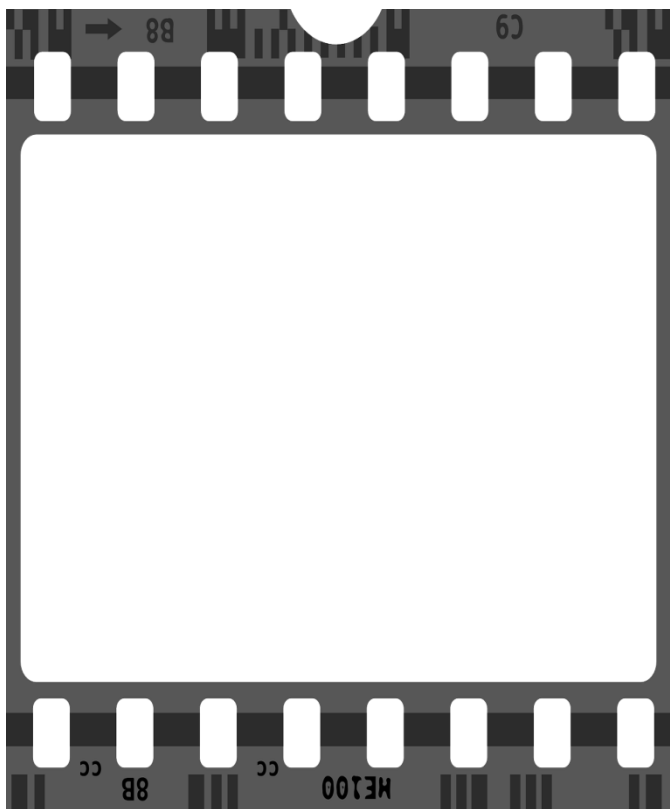

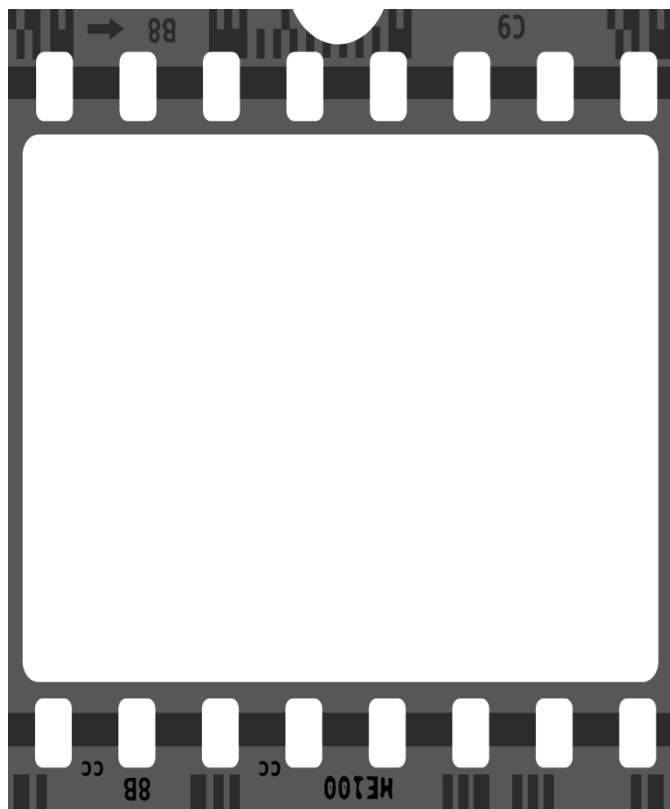

5. What is the main setting/s of the movie? Where do you think it should be filmed? What scenic items need to be included in the movie (specific historical structure, specific props, etc.)?

6. Pick a scene from the movie. Explain the background of the scene and then include an excerpt of the scene (dialogue, action occurring, etc.). If needed, use a separate piece of paper.

7. In the film strip, draw a segment of the film. Each film square should show just 1 part of the scene/film segment

8. What will you say when the producer asks "why should I produce your movie?"

This is due at the end of class.

The Fine Print:

While there is no actual movie producer interested in your movie, I will pick one plot as my favorite and that person will receive extra credit.

8. What will you say when the producer asks " why should I produce your movie?"

This is due at the end of class.